DISCUSSED COERCION.
These communications were sufficiently serious for the contingency of the United States of alilied forces of European nations for the coercion of the United States to be frankly discussed between the two diplomatias. The result of that discussion was to put a summary stop to all notion of European intervention.

"If you intervene," said the American Yes, "rejoined his visitor, "and the forces of the great European powers, acting in alliance, would overwhelm any opposition which American could offer." DISCUSSED COERCION.

acting in alliance, would overwhelm any opposition which American could offer."

THEIR HANDS FULL.

"No doubt." said the American, "but you would have to bring your forcest of your natural life. For the New World is not going to submit to the Old World any more. No, sir, not any more than it submitted a century since, when the odds were far worse. And remember," he added, as a clincher, "that when you were bringing your armies and your navies across 3.000 miles of sea to fight America you would have to count with England, who is certainly not friendly to your enterprise."

"This put an extinguisher on the proposal. Nothing more was heard of the contemplated intervention. It never got far as to be submitted to England. The whole design was checked at the very outset by the calm audacity with which the representative of America played his cards, including the trump card of the Anglo-American entente, which henceforth will play a leading part in all the dealings of the English speaking people with their jealous and suspicious neighbors.

and that, therefore, England had never had the occasion or oportunity to put her foot down on the lanti-American coalition. That, no doubt, was true as far as overt action on the part of the government was concerned, but it is not less true that immediately after the war broke out a diplomatic representative of

A Terrible Revenge.

A Terrible Revenge.

CRISFIELD. MD., Dec. 2—Some weeks ago Capt. James Crockett, of Pungoteasque, Va., and his mate, who were dredging with the schooner Frank Cassidy for oysters in the Potomac River, were shot and killed by the negro cook. It has now come to light that the act was premeditated, carefully planned and coolly carried out, and the man who thus cruelly nurdered two men in cold blood knew that death would also be his portion, but preferred revenge to life and liberty. Fight wears ago the same negro was that death would also be his portion, but preferred revenge to life and liberty. Eight years ago the same negro was cook on a dredge-boat commanded by Capt. Crockett, and one merning while dredging off Point Lookout, in the Bay, the Captain and cook had some difficulty, in which the Captain was badly wounded by the cook shooting him is the hip. The cook was overpowered and handed over to the officers of the law. For this assault upon the Captain the cook was sentenced to seven years in the position-tiary. He served out his term, and, watching his chance, offered himself to Captain Crockett again.

Capt. Crockett, not recognizing him, hired him for a trip down the Bay, with the result that one day the cook walked out of the cabin with a cocked revolver, and without a word of warning shot the Captain dead in his tracks. The mate grappled with the murderer, and in disarming him was shot in the abdomen, and died in a few hours. The crew, who witnessed it the dead ware an inconvent at the dead ware an inconvent at the dead ware an inconvent at the arming him was shot in the abdomen, and died in a few hours. The crew, who witnessed the deed, were so incensed at the act that they beat the murderer insensible, cut his throat with an oyster shovel, and tossed the body overboard to feed the fishes, thus ending one of the most terrible tragedies ever enacted upon the deck of an oyster-boat.—Washington Post.

Within a brief period—hardly more than a year—the American stage has lost Couldock, Mrs. John Drew, Thomas Keene, Joseph Proctor, Thomas Whiffen, Joseph W. Shannon, Charles T. Parsloe, W. J. Scanlon, John Wild, Harry Meredith, Charlette Thompson, Margaret Mather, Carrie Turner, and others who adorned it. The deaths of these actos says Harrison Grey Piske, sum up a great public loss, but the loss to the profession is even greater, for among those who have departed were artists whose work was an education to the rising generation of players who
